Directory of Accounting Firms and Practitioners 1977

Listed geographically in the pages of this directory are individual accounting practitioners and accounting firms all of whose partners are members of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the national professional society of accounting.

Founded in this country with the licensing of a handful of CPAs in New York in 1896, the profession has enjoyed phenomenal growth, in recent decades doubling in numbers approximately every ten years, to reach an estimated 170-180,000 by the end of 1977. Of that number, more than 134,000 are members of AICPA.

Qualifications of the CPA

In order to be accepted for licensing by a state or territorial board of accountancy, a candidate for certified public accountant must satisfy certain stringent requirements set by law.

Education

In many states, it is necessary to have the equivalent of a college baccalaureate degree, and at least two will require five years of college study.

Uniform CPA Exam

Even in those jurisdictions with lesser educational requirements, the demands of the two-and-a-half day uniform CPA qualifying examination are such that candidates lacking a college degree are likely to find it difficult to pass. The four-part examination tests an individual's grasp of auditing, accounting theory and practice, and business law. Few pass all four parts at any one sitting. The examinations are given each year in May and November at sites throughout the country.

Experience Requirement

In many states, there is an additional requirement that a candidate have a specific amount of practical experience, usually at a public accounting firm. The length of service required generally ranges from one to three years. In some jurisdictions, additional education may be substituted for the experience requirement.

Continuing Study

After acceptance by a board of accountancy, a CPA must periodically reregister and have his certificate renewed. To remain current with developments in the profession, CPAs find it necessary to engage in regular, continuing professional education activities.

Professional Ethics

In addition to the discipline of state laws and the rules of boards of accountancy, practitioners and firms listed in this book are subject to the Code of Professional Ethics administered by AICPA, which admonishes:

The conduct toward which CPAs should strive is embodied in five broad concepts stated as affirmative Ethical Principles:

Independence, integrity, and objectivity. A certified public accountant should maintain his integrity and objectivity and, when engaged in the practice of public accounting, be independent of those he serves.

Competence and technical standards. A certified public accountant should observe the profession's technical standards and strive continually to improve his competence and the quality of his services.

Responsibilities to clients. A certified public accountant should be fair and candid with his clients and serve them to the best of his ability, with professional concern for their best interests, consistent with his responsibilities to the public.

Responsibilities to colleagues. A certified public accountant should conduct himself in a manner which will promote cooperation and good relations among members of the profession.

Other responsibilities and practices. A certified public accountant should conduct himself in a manner which will enhance the stature of the profession and its ability to serve the public.

The Concepts, Rules and Interpretations of the Code of Professional Ethics, as well as a copy of the code itself, may be obtained by writing to AICPA, 1211 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036. Single copies are free of charge.

Enforcement

Complaints alleging violation of the Code of Professional Ethics received by the Institute are turned over for investigation to its Division of Professional Ethics. If after investigation the Division believes a violation has occurred, the respondent may be disciplined administratively or summoned before a Trial Board for a hearing. If found guilty, he will be publicly admonished, and may be suspended or expelled from Institute and state society membership. State licensing boards may suspend or revoke CPA certificates for violation of provisions in state accountancy laws or rules of conduct of the regulatory board. The Institute welcomes inquiries on any aspect of professional conduct and will respect confidences when requested.

Practice Review Committee

Reports from any source of allegedly substandard reports by CPAs are reviewed by the AICPA Practice Review Committee. If the committee finds that a report is indeed less than it should be, it will point out to the CPA concerned his departures from accepted standards. Names of those making complaints to the Practice Review Committee are held in confidence.

Other Institute Activities

More than 200 AICPA boards, committees, and task forces study various aspects of the profession.

The Institute publishes America's leading accounting periodical, the Journal of Accountancy, which is read by more than 212,000 CPAs, business managers, government officials, and educators. It also publishes The Tax Adviser, a monthly magazine, and the semi-monthly CPA Letter.

The Institute's headquarters houses one of the most comprehensive libraries on accounting in the world.

In addition to their Institute membership, most CPAs belong also to a state CPA society. The state societies, while not formally affiliated with the Institute, work closely with it.

Financial Accounting Standards Board

The Financial Accounting Standards Board, an independent organization supported by the Institute, as well as by accounting firms, the business community, and the general public, is the leading authority in the private sector on what constitutes generally accepted accounting standards.

The AICPA governing Council has designated the FASB as the body to establish accounting standards enforceable under the Institute's Code of Professional Ethics. The Securities and Exchange Commission has stated in an official release that it looks to the FASB to provide leadership in establishing and improving accounting standards.
